“ Working at Imperial, the nursing home Mary was in, I remember when Mary pulled me to the side to tell me what a terrible job I was doing as Activity Director and how I should be properly doing my job to correctly please her. Even though she did not know what my boss, the building administrator had told me I needed to be doing. Yes, Mary Chonka was quite a know-it-all telling all other staff members how things needed to be to please her. Her actions alone were my last straw in a very difficult job and I quit my job because of her. I am so happy she is finally gone and no longer tormenting her caregivers with her never-ending demands. Hopefully she will be experiencing firsthand how she made others feel in her afterlife so she might gain a little bit of humbleness.
